

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

There are provided a technique for improving a fuel cell output, and a technique for preventing reduction in an output during operation of a fuel cell. An air electrode consists of catalyst particles, carbon particles supporting the catalyst particles, an ion-exchange resin, a catalyst layer comprising a proton-conducting substance and a conductive porous substrate supporting the catalyst layer.